1. The former Institute for Brain Research (Institut für Hirnforschung) in Berlin-Buch, now affiliated with the Akademie der Wissenschaften, has recently done extensive recruiting of scientists from all zones for work in the institute. The institute is at present concerned with virus research, bacteriological research, and cell research (Zellforschung).
2. Professor Friedrich, formerly with the Charité in Berlin, a known specialist on radiation physics and one of the discoverers of x-ray deviation through crystals, [REDACTED] was recruited by the institute and is willing to go there. The well known theoretical physicist, Professor Pasqual Jordan, was also asked to join the institute; he refused to do so but agreed to make contributions to the work of the institute and possibly to work there during academic vacations.
3. The following scientists are now working at the institute: Professor Dr. Möglich, head of one of the departments in the institute; Dr. E. Ruska, a specialist in electronic microscopy; his brother Dr. H. Ruska, a specialist in medical physics; and Professor R. Rompe, reported to be a member of the Central Committee of the German Communist Party.
